The Smart Board of Directors met on May 6th for a daylong planning session. The day began with Kevin Cahill, President-elect, Debbie DeCoito, Executive Director, and Joseph Bowers, Controller, summarizing the sessions they attended at the National Association of Workforce Boards (NAWB) conference. The conference focus was on the new Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) and the changes our programs will need to make as the Act is implemented in July 2015. Program Supervisors, Kim Cobbler and Laurie Greig, presented the outcomes of the strategic goals for PY 2014-15. As part of the afternoon's discussion, Kathy Sarmiento, CEO of The Job Training Center, facilitated a consensus workshop on the results of a recent Board Assessment Survey. The workshops helped to define the roles of the board members, refine our mission statement and set the vision for Smart.

Youth Success Stories

It has been a couple of busy months in the youth program. We have been working with several youth engaging them in looking at career paths, researching Labor market information, workshops and completing resumes.

Logan is looking into a Law Enforcement career, researching all aspects of different departments and schooling. He started working with Shasta Trinity National Forest to see the “inside” look and what law enforcement does to keep our forest safe. He will also be cleaning and repairing campground sites while traveling to different locations throughout the county.

Jerrick has completed 2 semesters of college, but was still unsure of his career path. He completed a “Career Aptitude test” and found out he likes to build and take things apart! He also enjoys working with computerized equipment. Even though he has never worked before, he was pretty excited about starting work at Ace Hardware. After his initial interview with the Manager, he was welcomed onboard as a team member. He will be learning many aspects of the different departments showing off his great customer skills!
